BLOOMFIELD, N. J., JULY 1, 1882.

THE END.

To the last the most persistent efforts were made to prolong the life of the assassin GUITEAU. The final appeal to the President was answered adversely by the unanimous decision of the Cabinet, to which the case was submitted. Although the prisoner manifested, at each failure in his behalf, that he realized that, one by one, every thread of hope was being cut, yet he deliberately concluded to play out the farce of a false plea of "inspiration." No one will wonder at the endeavors of his relatives to shield him. This is only natural. At the same time it must be judged that the course they pursued but adds to the disgrace resting upon their family.

The common instincts of humanity will prompt a feeling of pity for even one so debased and criminal as the murderer of GARFIELD. But his execution will work good. The moral atmosphere of our country needs to be purified of a false sentimentality which yields its sympathy to the basest criminal and invests him with the idea of a hero. It needs to be toned up to a higher sense of justice which antagonizes the dishonest claim of insanity for every unnaturally depraved act. The execution of GUITEAU will contribute to these results. Our people would fain forget the details of the trial, and our history will point its finger at his gallows in warning against the practices which led to this end.

SUMMER RESORTS.

Things which were formerly regarded as luxuries, to be enjoyed by only the few, are now deemed necessaries that may be shared by the many. Time was when a visit to the seaside was within the means of the well-to-do alone; but now even the poor can manage to make a trip to the ocean, spend a few days there, the expense be scarcely more than the cost of living at home, and the excursion prove at once a source of pleasure and of health.

Long Branch still holds its own as a fashionable resort, promising to be more largely patronized this season than in any previous year, the cottages renting at higher figures than ever before. But, just below this place, are more attractive resorts for those who seek real rest and true recreation. Asbury Park and Ocean Grove continue to grow in favor and in accommodations for visitors. In the not distant future the many places springing up along the New Jersey coast may be combined in one long city by the sea. With the interdict of the liquor traffic and with the wise regulations prevailing at the Park and the Grove, no better places could be desired for rest. The beach is unsurpassed, the surf-bathing most delightful, and the moral and social influences only favorable. The expense of a few weeks' trip to these Summer resorts is within the reach of the many, while Coney Island and Rockaway hold forth their attractions to those who prefer to make only a day's visit to the sea.

If those living near the ocean, like the people of Bloomfield, would gain the most benefit from a few weeks' vacation, they would do well to turn their steps inland. Greenwood Lake, Lake Hopatcong—on the D. L. & W. R. R.—the Catskills, and—even farther away—Lake George, the Adirondacks and the White Mountains present a wide choice to those seeking rest and recreation. To the overworked brain nothing quite equals a trip across the water.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

No class of men are much more deserving of respect than our physicians. This may be said, with special emphasis, of the gentlemen who serve in this capacity in our village. And, as a class over the land, they occupy a very important place. The standard of the profession is continually being advanced. The progress of scientific research and the application of knowledge thus acquired in medical practice is making the treatment of disease less and less a matter of experiment. The successful practitioner of to-day is one who keeps "read up" in his profession and relies not simply upon the knowledge gained in a few years' study in medical college and in physician's office years ago.

Diseases which formerly baffled the skill of physicians now yield, in the majority of cases, to medical treatment, if a good physician is promptly called at the outset of the complaint. It may appear that a needlessly large number of students are being graduated from our schools of medicine; but it should be borne in mind that the rapidly increasing population makes its demand for more men to guard the health and lives of the people. With this call is also a need of assistants in the sick-room, in the form of nurses trained for their peculiar duties. This want is being met, in part, by provisions made for practical education in some of our hospitals.

Two facts are worthy of special note in connection with the doctors. One is, that they are foremost in efforts to prevent disease by the dissemination of knowledge adapted to favor health; and the other is, a widening courtesy among the members of the medical profession, as seen in the action of the Medical Society of the State of New York. Although their action is not indorsed by the National Society, it is yet the promise of better relations in a fraternity which, in its different schools, can be helpful to each other and better serve the public good.

PRIZE-FIGHTING.

There seems to be an epidemic of the brutal practice of prize-fighting. The laws are against this, but the laws are evaded and men go on bruising each other in the "ring." It is a sad comment on our civilization. In the old days of Greece and Rome the bloody exhibitions of brute force and skill were common. Christianity came in to do away with such things, and aims, in all its principles and spirit, at the very roots of violence and love of blood, common to the depraved heart of man. In a larger sense it opposes itself to prize-fighting among nations, as between individuals. Only when righteous principle is at issue is even a nation justified in resorting to war.

What more can be done, and how is it to be done, in the application of true sentiment, to check the anew uprising tide of brutality? Possibly the omission of reports of prize-fights in our prominent newspapers would be one means of correcting the evil. For the incentive to the practice is not merely money, but notoriety—the "belt."

THE FUNNY MAN.

Far be it from us to discourage true wit, which is the spice of life. A good laugh is better than medicine. "Laugh and grow fat," or, "Laugh, if it makes you lean," are not bad maxims. Yet there is a time for something besides laughing, and there are occasions when laughter is unseemly. The exhibition of this propensity at the trial of the one who has just expiated his crime on the gallows is a case in point—an instance which made the sensible people of the United States blush for shame and subjected us to the ridicule of the civilized world. Did those who were convulsed with merriment at that time shake with laughter when the criminal was suspended on the gallows? As befitting the one time as the other.

THE RECORD is disposed to gratify a just taste for the humorous, as our columns will manifest, as it desires to be promotive of all that is good in society; but it raises the question whether the would-be funny man does not err in judgement in thinking that every place and occasion are suitable for his funny stories. If the practice of story-telling is not indicative of a superficial age, it will contribute largely to produce such a condition of things.

A chief aim at even religious assemblies and conventions is to excite laughter. The funny man will exert himself to awaken merriment, dragging in his stories, if need be, "by the head and shoulders." Not uncommon is it to hear the funny story in even sermons, and the pulpit appears at times, by reason of this failing, to be no more sacred than the rostrum.

There is a homely phrase, classified with slang yet having more than one grain of sense in it, as applied to the subject in hand, viz.: "Give us a rest."

OBITUARY.

MISS SARAH C. CRANE.

DIED, JUNE 17, 1882.

Every death is felt in some household, every one is missed from one home; but there are deaths that are felt in many homes. Such was the case with the death of Sarah Crane. Sixty-two quiet years, almost uneventful—as the stirring events of the world count—but rife with work for the Master, the unobtrusive work—a "cup of cold water to the least of these;" a gentle hand to soothe the aching brow; loving words and deeds to smooth the "hard places" for loved ones; hopeful, faithful prayers for the fainting ones; patient, submissive bearing of the crosses of life;—all preaching to us that she had "been with Christ and learned of him." Yet, outside of the homes of friends who were blessed by her presence and ministrations, she was to fame unknown; but what is earthly fame, compared with the record written in the "Lamb's book of Life"?—a record of innocent childhood hours, even then dedicated to God's service; the years of womanhood spent in solacing the declining years of honored parents and holding their hands to the brink of the dark river, where they clasp Jesus' on the other side; then years and years in which the homes of sisters and friends were brightened and blessed by her presence, though weighed down by bodily infirmities which were borne uncomplainingly and recognized as part of the "all things" that "work together for good." And so, supported by the everlasting arms, she lived—till one night in June, she slept and woke to eternal life in Heaven's never-ending Summer, and

"Death hath made no breach
In love and sympathy, in hope and trust;
No outward sigh or sound our ears can reach,
But there's an inward, spiritual speech
That greets us still, though mortal tongues be dust:

It bids us do the work that she laid down,
Take up the song where she broke off the strain.
So journeying till we reach the heavenly town,
Where are laid up our treasures and our crown,
Our lost loved ones will be found again.

ENDING THE SCHOOL YEAR.

EXERCISES AT THE BLOOMFIELD PUBLIC SCHOOLS YESTERDAY.

A LARGE AND INTERESTED ASSEMBLAGE PRESENT—SEVERAL VERY CREDITABLE ESSAYS READ—A MUCH HIGHER STANDARD OF SCHOLARSHIP ATTAINED THIS YEAR—COMPLIMENTARY FLORAL PRESENTS.

The closing exercises of the Bloomfield Public Schools occurred yesterday afternoon and were of a most interesting character. Among the many guests present were: the Board of Trustees, Rev. E. D. Simons, Rev. A. C. Frissell, Rev. D. R. Lowrie, Mr. Abel Baker and Mr. M. A. Dailey. The examinations having been gone through with during the week, the afternoon was devoted to a literary and musical programme, and much credit is due to all who participated in it. The platform, which was partially reserved for the Trustees, clergy, reporters, etc., was carpeted and the edge, to the depth of a foot, was strewn with flowers. At the centre was a tastefully arranged basket of evergreens and flowers. Mr. J. B. Dunbar, who has so satisfactorily filled the position of principal of the Schools during the year, conducted the exercises. The singing was in charge of Mr. Woodhull, the Assistant-Principal, Master Willie Carl officiating as accompanist on the organ. An interesting and varied programme was arranged and is worthy of a detailed account of each and every part of it, but space forbids at the present writing. As among the very many meritorious contributions to the afternoon's enjoyment, however, mention must be made of the fine singing by the School. The oration entitled "The Downfall of the United States" was admirably rendered by Master Frederick Robley. Worthy of special mention were the essays of Miss M. A. Woodhull and Miss Helen Tanner, of the High School. The recitation entitled "Hot Weather," by Miss Clara Jones and Master Willie Dailey, was heartily enjoyed by all present.

The most interesting part of the programme—to the scholars, at least—was the reading of the names of those who, by hard work and study, had won the honor of being promoted to higher classes next term. The number of promotions, as compared with last year, convinced all of the grand success of the year's labor. Merit alone has won the laurels and the same rigor has been enforced this year as last. To the successful scholars, as well as to those who made an honest effort for the prize of promotion but came short, is due the utmost praise that can be given.

Recognition is due to the Principal of the School and his assistant, with their corps of efficient teachers, who have so conscientiously discharged their duties during the past year, and to them the people of Bloomfield will extend their best wishes for a pleasant time during their well earned respite from school duties and trust they may return to us refreshed from the enjoyment they will have and encouraged to again fall into the line of duty. Mr. Dunbar, the Principal, Mr. Woodhull, Assistant-Principal, and Master Willie Carl, Organist, were the recipients of elegant floral tributes from the High School, Mr. C. W. Maxfield making the presentation.

IN REGARD TO THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

A meeting of the Bloomfield Village Improvement Association was held at Upper Library Hall, on Wednesday evening, in the interest of a Public Library and Reading-room, at which there were present a number of citizens who are interested in matters of a literary character, and also a few ladies. Dr. J. A. Davis, President of the Association, presided. Rev. C. E. Knox, presented a report of the Library Committee, discussing the success or failures of public libraries in Newark, Rahway, Morristown and other places, also giving a history of libraries in Bloomfield, etc. Rev. S. W Duffield, a member of the Library Committee, addressed the meeting, presenting the importance of the movement and suggesting ways and means of carrying it out and of elevating the literary standard of the town. After his address, a discussion of questions was had and was participated in by Rev. Drs. Farrington and Stubbert and Messrs. Davis, Frissell, Barrett and Dr. Pierson.

VISITORS OF REV. MR. LOWRIE.

On Thursday of this week the Rev. Mr. Lowrie and wife were the recipients of a call from about twenty members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Hoboken, members of a former charge of the pastor. A most enjoyable time was had by all. The visitors brought with them an ample supply of good things, and an impromptu lawn-party was immediately organized. A visit to the Park M. E. Church was next in order, and after expatiating upon its beauty, the remark was made by one of the visitors that all that was needed now was a lecture-room to make the church complete. It was suggested that a collection be taken as a nest-egg towards building a lecture-room. The collection was lifted and three dollars and ten cents was realized—besides a good deal of pleasure.

BAPTIST SABBATH-SCHOOL ELECTION.

At a meeting of the officers and teachers of the Sabbath-school of the Baptist Church held last Monday evening the following-named persons were chosen as officers for the year to come: F. B. Stone, Superintendent; Geo. P. Farmer, Assistant-Superintendent; James C. Brown, Secretary and Treasurer; Ellis Williamson and Seymour Gilbert, Librarians. Very complimentary resolutions were unanimously passed extending thanks to C. W. Maxfield and D. G. Garabrant for their faithful and efficient labors as Superintendent and Assistant-Superintendent for years past. These gentlemen declined re-election, the former because of absence from Bloomfield during the Summer and the latter in view of the great pressure of duties in other directions.

NOVEL MISSIONARY CONTRIBUTIONS.

The Quarterly Missionary Meeting of the Baptist Church Sabbath-school was held last Sunday night. The general exercises and the address by Rev. Dr. Sheldon were very interesting. The report of the Secretary, Chas. G. Russell, showed a marked increase in the mission offerings for the last quarter. Old papers, to the amount of a hundred pounds, were brought in by members of the School, the proceeds of the sale of which are to be added to the mission fund. The School has a thousand hills of pop-corn growing, the product of which is to be disposed of at a grand "Harvest Home" in the Fall for the mission cause. Everything practicable is being done for the good object. Other schools should be incited by the example to like endeavors.

The following item appears in The Danbury News of this week: Mr. E. Westlake, associate editor of the Bloomfield RECORD, of New Jersey, is spending a few days in town, and is a guest at the Wooster House. Mr. Westlake is also a representative of Barlow's Insurance Surveys of New York city, and is transacting insurance business for the same. By his gentlemanly bearing and genial disposition he has already made many warm friends among the business men in town.

The organ concert given in the Congregational Church at Montclair, on Friday evening of last week, was enjoyed by a number of our music-loving citizens and was a grand success. The organ recitations of Prof. Geo. W. Morgan were admirably rendered and brought forth loud and continued applause. The harp solos by Miss Morgan were equally well received by the audience.

The subject of Rev. D. R. Lowrie's sermon to-morrow evening will be: "Our Revolutionary Fathers—Who they Were and What they Did." A cordial invitation is extended by the pastor to the Wm. S. Pierson Post and the Bloomfield Battery to be present.

The family excursion, under the auspices of the Park M. E. Church, to Glen Island promises to be well attended and beyond doubt will be a most enjoyable event. Let all who can, avail themselves of this opportunity to spend a most delightful day.

The attention of those who have not as yet rendered a statement to the Assessor of their taxable personal property for the current year is called to a notice made by him elsewhere in regard to the matter.

An excursion of the Knights of Pythias, of Jersey City, took place at Greenwood Lake on Tuesday of this week. Fourteen cars were well filled by the Knights and their friends.

An orchestra company has been formed in town, composed of a number of musical gentlemen, and it has prospects of being an entire success.

The families of Messrs. J. M. Brancroft, J. P. Jones and Henry Russell will spend a portion of the Summer at Point Pleasant.

Dr. W. H. White reports the health of Bloomfield good at the present time. Malarial diseases have disappeared almost entirely.

Mr. W. W. Wyman, who has been confined to his home for a number of days from sickness, is able to be about again.

Rev. H. W. Ballantine and Wm. A. Baldwin, sailed per steamer Greece of the National line for Europe on Wednesday last.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. SMITH, KLINE & CO., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and C. N. CRITTENTON, New York.

MOONLIGHT ON THE HUDSON

MEMBERS OF THE CORNET BAND ENJOYING THEIR ANNUAL SAIL.

SALUTING THE RIVER-STEAMERS WITH SWEET STRAINS AND RECEIVING GENEROUS RECOGNITION—A CHARMING EVENING ON THE WATER—ENJOYING ALL KINDS OF AMUSEMENTS.

On Wednesday evening last, through the kindness of Mr. Walter Morris, the Bloomfield Amateur Cornet Band enjoyed their second moonlight excursion up the Hudson River. The members of the Band were out in force and, upon arrival of the 5:10 train from Bloomfield, embarked on the staunch steam-tug Stephen Decatur. Beside the members of the Band the following invited guests were noticed: Messrs. Jarvis Peloubet, Nelson Hayes, W. Schouler, Geo. Roubaud, Jas. Buck, H. Porter, F. Eveland, and S. Cueman. The boat was beautifully decorated with flags and pennants and presented a handsome appearance. The signal was given by Captain Day and the lines were cast off and the party glided out of the slip into the Hudson. The evening was most propitious, all on board were in the happiest mood, and a good time was not only anticipated but fully enjoyed by all present. At Twenty-third Street Professor Wiegand and Mr. E. Davis were taken on Board and the leader of the Band (Mr. Wiegand) was heartily welcomed by his class. Again the boat started and shortly after passed the United States steam-frigates Tennessee and Yantic, which were anchored amidstream. The Band struck up a selection from the opera of "Patience," and, as they glided by the steamers, the sailors on board acknowledged their presence by waving hats and handkerchiefs. The whistle of the Decatur was loudly blown and the colors dipped in accordance with naval requirements.

Far in our wake could be seen two river-steamers, bound up the majestic and beautiful Hudson. As the leader slowly gained upon us, the Band prepared to receive them. The first to pass the Decatur was the City of Troy—the same steamer that passed the Band a year ago under similar circumstances—and, as the Band rendered one of their favorite selections, the decks of the City of Troy were filled with passengers from the cabins. Handkerchiefs and hats were waved, whistles blown as salutes and a general recognition was given in appreciation of the occasion. Numerous excursion-parties were passed, on their way to New York, and the scenes of recognition were again enacted. After passing the city of Yonkers the steamer Drew, of the People's Line, overhauled us. The Band did their best in rendering the "Medley of 1882," and the steamer did its best with its whistle as an accompaniment, while the passengers carried on a hat and handkerchief flirtation with our party. They soon parted company with us and, shortly after, supper was announced. Ample provision had been made by the stewards for this important occasion, but the charge made upon the good things prepared fully demonstrated the fact that the Band's devastating propensities were equal to their faculties for rendering sweet music, and hot coffee, sandwiches, cake, ice-cream and lemonade vanished with startling rapidity. The cravings of the inner man satisfied, all on board were joyous. Messrs. Schouler, Hayes, Roubaud and Morris rendered some fine vocal selections and jokes and witticisms were the order of the hour.

Rockland Lake Point being reached the prow of the Decatur was turned homeward. A number on mischief bent assembled forward and instituted what might be called a rope-walk, for the first one that appeared anywhere near them was immediately roped in and lashed fast to the capstans. An event occurred which was not on their programme, for the mate quietly gave the order to the deck-hands to wash down decks. The hose was attached to the steam-pump and the stream was turned on the forward deck, and we soon had very heavy weather and shipped immense quantities of water, and many had the pleasure of paying homage to Old Neptune in crossing the line. All enjoyed the fun and, as we glided into the slip near the Hoboken Ferry, many wishes were expressed for the recurrence of a like event.

By request of the Amateur Cornet Band THE RECORD hereby tenders to Mr. Walter Morris, Captain Day and Engineer Briggs their sincere thanks for the delightful excursion and for the hospitality and attention shown to all on board, and also to Mr. Charles Morris for the many favors shown the Band and the invited guests.

SHERIFF'S SALE—In Chancery of New Jersey—Between The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, complainant, and Augustus Baldwin and als., defendants—Fi. fa., for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias, to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in Newark, on Tuesday, the twenty-seventh day of June next, at two o'clock P. M., all that tract or parcel of land and premises situate, lying and being in the township of Bloomfield, Essex County, New Jersey:

Beginning on the east side of the road leading from Bloomfield Meeting House to Stone House Plains at a corner of land now or late of Ichabod Baldwin; thence along his line and lands of Sarah Hayes and Nehemiah Baldwin south seventy-six degrees thirty-five minutes east forty chains fifty links to Second river; thence up the river five chains and fifty links to land now or late of Ichabod Baldwin; thence along his line north seventy-six degrees twenty minutes west to the middle of the road; thence along the middle of said road five chains eighty-seven and one-half links to the beginning.

Being the late homestead place and farm of William B. Baldwin, deceased, situate on the easterly side of the road from Bloomfield to Paterson, and containing in all twenty-three acres and seventy-five hundredths, and the same conveyed to said William B. Baldwin by Ichabod Baldwin and wife, February 4th, 1823, for the equal half part which the said Ichabod bought of John A. Miller, and bounded on the east by Second river; on the west by the middle of the road; on the north by lands late of said Ichabod Baldwin, Sarah Hayes and Nehemiah Baldwin; and on the south by the other half part of the tract, excepting out of the premises herein included a small tract sold and conveyed by said William B. Baldwin to Edmund H. Davey.

Saving and reserving out of the above described land two tracts released by said Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, to said Augustus Baldwin: One Tract being particularly described in Deed of Release, dated May 27th, 1871, and recorded June 8th, 1871, in Book K, 15 of Deeds for Essex County on page 385, etc., and the other Tract being particularly described in Deed of Release dated January 10th, 1873, and recorded May 2, 1873, in Book A, 17 of Deeds for said county, on pages 483, etc.

Newark, N. J., April 28th, 1882.

STONEWALL JACKSON.

We found him on the blood-stained field of Antietam—almost at the close of his career instead of at the beginning. The world knows how he fought there. We found him at Kernstown fighting one to four—fighting, falling back—grimly giving way to fight again. We saw him strike the Federal armies right and left in the valley and fill Washington with white faces. We found him at Fredericksburg on Lee's right—at Chancellorsville in Hooker's rear—at Manassas behind Pope—in his front. We found him at Gaines' Mill. Fate waited for him before striking a last blow. It was the hammer in his grasp which shattered the Federal position. Without him Longstreet and Hill would have been pressed back—routed—annihilated.

A Christian in his faith—a child in his sympathies—a general who cared not for the world's admiration so much as for the comfort of any single man who followed him in his wonderful marches. He had the courage of a lion and the heart of a woman. The pomp and glitter of war were not for him. His banners grew old and faded and shot-worn. His legions grew ragged and foot-sore and weary. No matter who flattered—Jackson had faith. No matter who hesitated—Jackson advanced. Fierce in the heat of battle, because it was his duty to kill, when the roar of cannon had died away the groans of the wounded reached a heart which had a throb for every groan.

Partisans may keep their bitterness of heart, but the world has spoken. The man whom they hate forgiving all. Struck down at Chancellorsville, amidst the roar of battle, he was removed to die amidst the softest peace. Strong men wept like children when they saw his last hour had come, but if they had a feeling of revenge, down under their sorrow, he had none. With malice toward none—with forgiveness for all, his life went out as his pale lips whispered:

"Let us cross over and rest under the shade of the trees!"

"And may he ever rest!"

LOTS OF FUN IN HIM.

One of the members of the Methodist Conference held in Detroit was out for a walk at an early hour one morning, and encountered a strapping big fellow who was drawing a wagon to a blacksmith shop.

"Catch hold here and help me down to the shop with this wagon, and I'll buy the whiskey," called the big fellow.

"I never drink," solemnly replied the good man.

"Well, you can take a cigar."

"I never smoke."

The man dropped the wagon tongue, looked hard at the member, and asked:

"Don't you chew?"

"No, sir, was the decided reply.

"You must be mighty lonesome," mused the teamster.

"I guess I'm all right; I feel first rate."

"I'll bet you even that I can lay you on your back," said the teamster.

"I never bet," said the clergyman.

"Come, now, let's warm up a little."

"I'm in a hurry."

"Well, let's take each other down for fun, then. You are as big as I am, and I give you the under hold."

"I never have fun," solemnly replied the member.

"Well, I'm going to tackle you anyhow. Here we go."

The teamster slid up and endeavored to get a back hold, but he had only just commenced his fun when he was lifted clear off the grass and slammed against a tree box with such force that he gasped a half a dozen times before he could catch his breath.

"Now, you keep away from me," exclaimed the minister, picking up his cane.

"Bust me if I don't," replied the teamster as he edged off. "What's the use in lying and saying you didn't have any fun in you, when you are chuck full of it? You wanted to break my back, didn't you?"—Detroit Free Press.

SHE INSISTED ON HIS ENJOYING HIMSELF.

She would rather that he would go to the play than not, she said. She wanted him to enjoy himself. No one should say that his wife stood in the way of his having a good time; and indeed he needed relaxation. To be sure, she couldn't go with him, because she hadn't anything decent to wear, though that wasn't his fault, for his wages were small, and living cost so much now-a-days. Even if she had clothes fit to be seen at the theatre, there was no one to leave the baby with, for they couldn't afford a nurse, as most other people could, but that must not keep him from going, as a man who works hard all day must have a change occasionally. She knew very well the neighbors would talk about his going to the theatre by himself, leaving his wife alone in the house, except the baby. And a fire might break out, or a burglar break in, but he mustn't let such thoughts disturb him, but watch the play and try and have a good time. She had thought of asking him for half a dollar, to get her poor dear mother a birthday present, but let it go now. A man could work so much better if he went out and enjoyed himself once in a while, and so she wanted him to go. Although she had heart disease and was liable to drop dead any minute, and the baby had symptoms of croup, yet he shouldn't stop at home on that account or let it worry him any while sitting in the theatre.

As everything seemed combined to make him have a good time in his little plan of relaxation at the play, we wonder he did not go, but he didn't, though he gave it up with a sigh, for it had been months since a ray of amusement had relieved the murky atmosphere of daily toil.—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

CASTLE GARDEN IN 1850.

Castle Garden, which has been given over for many years to the invading hordes from Europe, was at one time (and to the present elder generation of New Yorkers it must seem not long ago) the most widely known and generally frequented place of popular amusement in the city. It began to be so used in the days when the lower part of Broadway and Greenwich street were fashionable, and when the Battery was the favorite promenade.
